

Nairobi, Kenya,
 Hybrid full day event
 24th February 2022

We are excited to announce that AHB is curating the next AHBS under the theme: The role of the private sector in advancing women's health in Africa. with the objective to prioritise, explore and strengthen the role of the private sector in advancing women's health in Africa.

We have chosen to put a spotlight on women's health in Africa as we believe more needs to be done to advance women's health on the continent. Women in Africa are more likely to die from communicable diseases (such as HIV, tuberculosis and malaria), maternal and perinatal conditions, and nutritional deficiencies, than women in other regions of the world.

AHBS VII will be a full-day highly interactive hybrid event, on February 24th 2022, allowing both in-person and virtual participation, welcoming eminent health experts, business leaders and development partners to discuss, share information and provide lessons learned on key areas that affect women's health in Africa

Programme For The Day

Stimulating content will be delivered in an engaging way - through sponsored plenary knowledge sessions, collaborative exclusive roundtable sessions, networking sessions, exhibition areas, side luncheons, dinner meetings - helping ensure key messages are retained and commitments are actioned.
